

Love Your Neighbour, Love Your Ocean, 2015

Larissa Blokhuis

Kitsilano has a strong history of love for the environment, and it's easy to understand why. The neighbourhood has beautiful Coast Salish beaches with mountains across the water. This imagery is iconic: an internationally recognised representation of what Vancouver is all about. The neighbourhood continually draws people who fall in love with the area and want to make it their home.

Love Your Neighbour, Love Your Ocean is intended to spark the joy of discovery. The whimsical creatures represent existing sea life, but also potential marine forms. Below the surface of the water, there is a beautiful and enticing world of creatures who live very differently from us. When we choose to develop our curiosity and respect for life, we are able to live alongside fascinating creatures.

Humans are united by the need to connect with nature. Love Your Neighbour, Love Your Ocean is also intended to reflect the calm beauty of our landscape and Vancity's commitment to environmental sustainability and leadership. Time spent connecting with nature is vital, whether alone in introspection, or with friends in celebration. When we are reminded that we have the opportunity to honour the environment, we can make decisions that we are proud of.
